CUF1

Update in General Internal Medicine
Online Registration Title: Update In General Internal Medicine

Coordinator: Diane Altkorn, MD, Associate Professor of Medicine, Department of Medicine, The University of Chicago
Additional Faculty: Amber Pincavage, MD, The University of Chicago; Elizabeth Schulwolf, MD, MA, Loyola University Medical Center; Sachin D. Shah, MD, The University of Chicago; Scott Stern, MD, The University of Chicago

Session Summary
Keeping up with the current literature is a challenge for busy clinicians. We will present summaries of a selection of methodologically sound, clinically important articles published over the last 12 months, identified through regular review of major journals and journal summaries. We have critically screened the articles, selecting for presentation those we consider valid and containing results that will substantially impact our clinical practice.

In order to identify articles for inclusion in the presentation, we have regularly reviewed major journals (JAMA, NEJM, Annals of Internal Medicine, Archives of Internal Medicine, Lancet, BMJ) and journal summaries (ACP Journal Club). The presentation is organized into major topic areas, with the areas chosen dependent on themes identified in the published literature. During the presentation, we will briefly summarize each article selected and discuss the impact of the results on clinical practice.

Measurable Learning Objectives
- Be familiar with the breadth of literature published in the last 12 months
- Know the results of recent, clinically important studies
- Understand the limitations of the recent literature
- Be able to apply the literature in their clinical practice

Session Agenda:
30 minutes: Lecture presentation, part 1
10 minutes: Q and A
30 minutes: Lecture presentation, part 2
10 minutes: Q and A
10 minutes: Session Evaluation