

SGIM Regional Young Scholars Program

The Regional Young Scholars Program will open on January 15, 2025, and close on February 12, 2025, for the 2025 Northwest Regional Meeting.

This scholarship program is designed to allow SGIM's medical students and residents to attend its regional meetings and to develop educational and leadership skills in the field of GIM.

The scholarship is intended to offset the cost of attending your regional SGIM meeting outside of your city, including costs such as registration, poster printing, hotel, and travel up to $500.

Who should apply?

Medical students, interns, and residents who are interested in attending their respective regional meeting of SGIM.

Preference will be given to applicants who live more than 50 miles from the meeting location, first-time attendees, those presenting at this year's regional meeting, and those who are not eligible for other financial assistance through their training programs.

We encourage all students and residents who are interested to join SGIM and apply for the scholarship today! Learn more about membership.

Why should I apply?

The Regional Young Scholars in GIM Scholarship is designed to give students, interns, and residents the opportunity to attend their respective regional SGIM meeting and allow them to fully experience all that SGIM has to offer. The SGIM regional meetings are a major hub of networking and offer high quality programming in research, clinical, and educational content pertinent to General Internal Medicine.

To be considered, applicants must fill out the application linked below which includes criteria questions and two brief statements:

1. A brief statement (200 words or less) describing your interest in general internal medicine and career goals.
2. A brief statement (200 words or less) that describes your interest in and plans for your SGIM Regional Meeting. This may include presentations you are giving, sessions covering your areas of interest, networking, and/or how you might be able to use the knowledge or experience gained in your training, career, or further involvement in SGIM.
