Mentoring

- Primary Mentoring Roles:

Shavonne Collins, Emory Internal Medicine-Primary Care Resident; 2021-2022. Guided Shavonne through the design of an original research project focusing on barriers to adherence to medications for alcohol use disorder, among a cohort of patients within the Grady REACH (Reducing Alcohol: Committing to Health) Program. Assisted with data analysis and presentation at local and national conferences – see CV1. More recently, recommended Dr. Collins for the CDC’s Epidemiologic Intelligence Service (EIS) program, to which she was accepted and is currently serving!

Meghan Alexander, Georgia State University undergraduate student, 2022-2023. Meghan performed secondary data analysis with me and Dr. Lesley Miller, looking at hepatitis C cure outcomes among patients at the Grady Liver Clinic among people who reported use of alcohol versus those who did not. She presented her work during the Grady STaR (Student Trauma and Resuscitation Research Program) Symposium, and helped to draft a manuscript that is now under review with the Journal of Addiction Medicine. I wrote a letter of recommendation in support of Meghan's applications to medical school, and she has since been accepted at the Morehouse School of Medicine.
